Living Fossil/Story of the Coelacanth Keith S Thomson

Off the coast of southern Africa, in the winter of 1938, a fishing boat, The Nerine, dragged from the Chalumna River a fish thought extinct for 70 million years. Here is the true story of that event and its significance. The author also describes the life and habitat of the coelacanth and what has been learned about it during the years since it was first discovered.
